ShredStation, a company that provides on-site document disposal stations, has signed a partnership with Leesport Bank and its subsidiary Madison Bank, an 18-branch banking chain serving five counties throughout the Philadelphia and Reading, PA markets.

Customers of Leesport and Madison at all 18 locations will have access to a ShredStation Secure Information Disposal Station to destroy sensitive documents.

ShredStation boxes are fully automated, self-diagnostic and totally secure. They are made of reinforced steel and stand at just over four feet tall - similar in design to a FedEx or DHL package drop box.

"ID Theft has become a major problem and people need a better solution than the typical once a year shred day sponsored by banks or TV stations," said Loren Berckey, an assistant VP with Leesport Financial Corp. "Leesport Bank works to help its costumers protect themselves from this crime all the time and with ShredStation, people can get rid of their sensitive documents as often as they like - at any of our 18 locations."

Leesport Bank is the first bank in the nation to place the Shred Station boxes in all its
